

Note by the UNECE Secretariat

ADR is available in book form and on CD-Roms, both products are sales products. They can be purchased from UN Publications and price can be negotiated if important quantities are bought. For the book, see <https://unp.un.org/Details.aspx?pid=22600> (French) or <https://unp.un.org/Details.aspx?pid=22599> (English) For the pdf files, see <https://unp.un.org/Details.aspx?pid=22973> (English) or https://unp.un.org/Details.aspx?pid=22974\(French\)) For the electronic files (pdf, word, excel) (bilingual English and French), see <https://unp.un.org/Details.aspx?pid=22930> .

For developing countries there is already a 50% discount. Participants should be aware of the conditions for use, because this is a touchy issue internally, notably due to the fact that certain indelicate companies reproduce these files, or print the text for reproduction for commercial purposes without asking permission, which has caused loss of revenues for the UN and problems in examination centers where candidates to the dangerous goods safety adviser certificate were denied the right to use publications other than the UN official text during the examination.

Participants are not authorized to duplicate it or parts thereof for commercial purposes- including training activities that are not provided free of charge- without permission of UN Publications, see <https://unp.un.org/Rights.aspx> for the procedure.

Governments may reproduce this CD-Rom, and print the text from the CD-Rom and reproduce it for internal use (e.g. for customs officers, police, transport controllers etc) without asking permission (but even in that case it may be cheaper for them to negotiate with UN Publications a licensing agreement for printing so that they can obtain the files that are used for printing.

There are files available free of charge on our web site, for consultation or downloading. We recommend this solution for several reasons: first this helps us monitoring the readership; second our website provides corrigenda or amendments that are not in the CD-Rom; thirdly it is important for users to know information about competent authorities, special agreements and quite a lot of ADR related information that is available only on our website. http://www.unece.org/trans/danger/publi/adr/adr\_e.html Finally it is important to ask recipients not to place any of the files on their own website. If Governments or private companies wish to inform citizens or their employees about ADR, they should provide a link to our website rather than posting the text. The reason is again that this helps us better monitoring the readership, but also that search engines may direct users to wrong information, e.g obsolete texts that are no longer in force but have not been deleted or updated from websites.

Finally the third product (electronic files) contain unprotected files in word format and excel format that can be used by administrations for drafting their national regulations and related administrative texts, or for IT applications by transport companies or the chemical industry. UN provide these files to governments free of charge, but only upon request so that we can also monitor developments in interested countries. Otherwise they are available on sale from UN Publications.
